SAFETY ZONE

5 Safety Tips for Fall Driving – IMPORTANT! October is here, and with it comes increased risk due to certain conditions that don't exist in the summer. Cooler weather, falling leaves and more create situations for which every trucker needs to prepare.

The following five issues are likely to crop up in September, October and November as that familiar chill in the air becomes more common:

- 1) Fallen leaves can hide big risks
- 2) The sun can be a bigger problem
- 3) More farm equipment on the road
- 4) Longer nights
- 5) Unexpected weather conditions

The weather in fall can vary a bit more widely than in summer, and truckers need to be aware of the risks they might face on their day's drive, according to Assured Partners. For instance, mornings may see more fog than you expect, while the rainstorms can arise out of nowhere. Likewise, frost becomes more common as autumn wears on, so make sure you check the forecast and road conditions before you head out.
